

Glucose Curve

This is an in house test used to determine diabetic treatment control. This is usually recommended about 1-2 weeks after starting insulin treatment, and regularly thereafter on a schedule to be recommended by the doctor to monitor control after dose changes, if the pet is not feeling well, or for regular check-ups.

You will drop your pet off with us around 8 am and they can usually go home between 5-6 pm.

The morning of the appointment, feed your pet and give insulin as you normally would and we will take a glucose reading when your pet first arrives. Blood samples are collected every 1-2 hours throughout the day to see how the levels rise and fall after the insulin has been given.

Please bring your pet's insulin with you to the appointment, so we can confirm correct dosing and advise you of any changes to dosing at discharge.
